Numerous players are constantly befuddled about which club they ought to decide for their next game. I am going to end this perplexity for the last time. The/r/golfclash individuals and Playdemic discussions have made an exceed expectations sheet which thinks about every one of the clubs and their quality and shortcomings. You can look at it here.

How to take the best shot?

If you want to take the best shot every time then consider the following tips:

Don't trust the AI. The game will automatically suggest you a trajectory to follow. Don't trust it every time. Use your own brain to find the best shot trajectory so that you can reach closest to the hole.

In order to hit the perfect mark every time, think of leaving the ball a little before the marker reaches the perfect mark. As our brain takes some time to react, by following this method we will leave the ball just at the perfect mark.

Too much power is not going to get the ball into the putt every time. Learn to use the optimal power. When optimal power is combined with optimal timing you get the best results.

Learn about spins

Many newbies ignore spins. Spinning the ball is going to help you take the best shots and reach closest to the hole. There are three types of spins that you have to master. First is the front-spin (ball moves ahead after bouncing on the ground), the second is the backspin (ball lower downs its speed after bouncing on the ground), and third is the side spin (ball moves left or right after hitting the ground).
